Behold him — the slow driver..

* * * *

May his tribe soon become extinct and may the last of them be hunted down, slaughtered and stuffed for museum purposes.

* * * *

He speeds not, neither does he halt.

* * * *

Behold him in all his glory on a Sunday or holiday..

* * * *

He heads a grand parade of tooting, cussing motorists, all anxious to pass him.

* * * *

Behold him, tight lipped and grim of face, holding to the middle of the road, his speedometer registering 15 miles an hour on the down grade.

* * * *

He has firmly made up his mind that he will not be involved in an accident.

* * * *

Behind him cars crash into other cars, fenders are bent, paint is scratched and tempers lost while other motorists, in a hurry, try to pass him.

* * * *

Curses are showered upon him by other drivers who are fortunate enough to pass him.

To which he pays not the slightest heed.

Finally the long string of cars pass him.

And another string soon gathers behind him, cussing, honking and tooting to deaf ears.

Behold him — the slow driver.

May the trastic cops arise in their wrath and "pinch" him for obstructing traffic.

CLUB HEARS OF TAX PLAN

Proposed improvements to tht Stege sanitary system and the efforts of the Contra Costa division of California Taxpayers' association to make taxpayers familar with county expenditures with the hope of, in some manner, curtailing the rapid rise of taxes were outlined to members of the Kensington Civic club last night.

Joseph McFarland, secretary of the county tax organization in a rapid fire talk, gave his listeners something to think about as to the reasons for climbing costs of government.

"The organized minority are the spenders of the community, while the unorganizer majority are the ones who foot the bills," declared MacFarland.

"Don't blame your supervisors for the rising costs of government," continued MacFarland. "Blame yourselves, because after all the county officials only have direct supervision over 15 per cent of the county expenditures.

"Farmers particularly in our county are finding taxes an extreme burden," said MacFarland. "Something must be done to devise ways and means to give relief, or at least a rest, some respite for a while," he declared.

Ross L. Calfee, chief engineer of the Stege Sanitary District, and El Cerrito city engineer, estimated the cost of a new main sewer of that at $140,000. The cost, borne by 15,000 lots, and spread over a 12 year period, will bring the average yearly assessment for a 40-foot lot to $1.00 Calfee estimated. This statement was reassuring in view of the rumors that property owners would suffer assessments of $200 per lot.

J. W. Gilbert was chairman of the meeting.

The next gathering of the club the regular monthly business session, will be held at the home of Will S. Robenson, well known Richmond attorney, president and founder of the club.

WOMAN TO "CLEAR" KILLER

SAN RAFAEL, May 31.—UP—As an audacious climax to rumors and counter rumors about the Sturtevant rum killing, Thomas P. Boyd, attorney for Vince "Peg-Leg" Lucich, announced today that Lucich's accusser would be used to clear him.

Boyd obtained a subpoena today, calling for the presence as defense witness at Lucich's trial of Mrs. Grace Berri, shot and seriously wounded by Lucich, she said, at the same time Melvern Sturtevant was killed.

Mrs. Berri had hertofore been regarded as the strongest witness for the proseuction.

New Evidence

Although District Attorney Henry Greer professed today to have heard new evidence bearing out Mrs. Berri's story—that Lucich shot herself and Sturtevant in cold blood and alone—Boyd's action was taken by close observers as meaning only one thing:

He does not believe her story, and hopes to 'break" her on the stand and to establish the presence at the murder scene of "higher-ups" in Marin county bootlegging circles whom he was accused as instigating Sturtevant's death.

Meanwhile, as federal authorities lent a suspicion of credibility, widening circles of conjecture had spread from the Sturtevant affair south to San Jose and north thru Santa Rosa to Seattle. In the light of undivulged information, authorities assertedly are working on the theory that the Sturtevant killing, the hijacking activities of peninsular rum dealers, the recent murder of a Seattle bootlegger and guerilla warfare among Marin county rum runners somehow be linked.

In Marin county, District Attorney Henry Greer turned his attention to reports of "shakedowns" among resort-keepers throughout

T. N. CALFEE IN ADDRESS AT SERVICES

Tsar N. Calfee, prominent local attorney, delivered the following address at the Memorial Day services at Sunset View cemetery Friday.

"Memorial Day, more than any other national holiday, has the power to unite the lives of all Americans into one great heartthrob. Our hero dead are resting in thousands of burial places from the fields of Flanders here to the very shore of the Pacific, and wherever they lie this day, there are gathered together loyal citizens; those brave and loving mothers who have journeyed to France to the graves of their sons who made the supreme sacrifice for American ideals in the last great war, to us who are gathered together here on this beautiful hill side overlocking the bay of San Francisco—wherever such groups are gathered together throughout the world our thoughts and hearts are united in paying a loving tribute of respect and reverence to the gallant men who sacrificed their lives in the cause of humanity. For let this be said that whether in the War of the Revolution, the War of 1812, the Civil War, the Spanish American War, the Mexican War or the World War, the American soldier has always been inspired by the cause of liberty. In these past war years much has been said and written of disillusionment of propaganda aimed at arousing the American youth but no matter what the verdict of history may be regarding America's stand in world affairs, one fact stands out clearly, American manhood has ever rallied to the defense of liberty, to the cause of the oppressed and never has and never could have been led into any war of aggression or conquest. "It is a good and promising thing for the future of America that on this day thousands of her sons and

2 DEAD IN GANG WAR

CHICAGO, May 31.—UP— Two gangsters assassinated a racketeer and wounded two of his companions today in a short, but deadly burst of alcohol warfare.

Riding in the traditional funeral automobile, the gangsters drove alongside the victims, aimed an automatic shotgun and began firing.

Fillipo Gnolfo, alcoholracketeer, was slain and Joe Fiassacha and Al Carnido were wounded.

A curtained automobile raced past the parked car in which the victims sat. A burst of pistol, shotgun and machine gun fire roared from between the curtains and the three men crumpled. The death car vanished as rapidly as it came and the assassins escaped.

Police said the shooting was a renewal of gang war in "The Valley," which in the past has taken many lives.

Stray bullets wounded 15-year-old Edward Zlatos, who was playing near the scene of the outbreak. He was struck in the right leg and in the back. Physicians ordered an operation on the boy in the belief that the bullets may have been dipped in poison.

A westbound schedule of 56 hours is provided for the Overland in the revised time table, and the eastbound schedule is to be reduced 50 minutes, making the time to Chicago approximately 57 hours. The schedule for this train has been 58 hours in both directions.

RUSE USED TO QUELL MOB

CHICKASHA, Okla., May 31.—UP—Trickery succeeded in quelling a riot here today after force of arms and arguments proved ineffective against a mob bent on lynching a Negro accused of attacking a white woman.

At daybreak, after a night of disorder, the rioters had injured four guardsmen, shot and stabbed the Negro, leaving him in a critical condition which later caused his death, and burned the jail. The infuriated party was repulsed repeatedly, only to return again, crying "Kill the black! Burn the jail."

Throughout Friday night national guardsmen and civil officers fought the mob in defense of the county jail in which was imprisoned Henry Argo, charged with attacking of Mrs. G. W. Skinner and choking her 19-months-old baby during the struggle.

Ruse Used

Then the troops and officers devised the ruse to remove the subject of the continued assaults.

Word was sent out to the milling men that the Negro was dead. Pickets marched through the crowd, clearing a path. Out of the smoking and shattered county jail came a litter, bearing the motionless body of Argo, still living, but covered with a white sheet.

Faced with armed force and the apparent presence of death, the rioters were held in momentary abeyance. The shouting which had made the night riotous subsided.

Hearse Waits

A hearse waited, its door open, a coffin visible through its glass-enclosed draperies. The body was lifted onto the bier. The funeral car raced [illegible] Oklahoma City, 50 miles away.

Argo still lived. He was borne in the coffin up the steps of University hospital at the capital and taken at once to an operating room.

SCHOOL DEBT SLASH SHOWN

LOS ANGELES, May 31.—Contra Costa county showed a decrease of $151,250 in total bonded indebtedness for elementary school 1928-1929 compared with 1925-1926, according to a study of the bonded debt of the school districts in California counties made public by California Taxpayers' association. The total bonded debt for the elementary schools in the county in 1928-29 was $1,512,500 while in 1925-1926 it was $1,663,750.

The bonded debt per pupil in average daily attendance in Contra Costa county was $36.43 less in 1928-1929, when it was $141.32 than the 1925-1926 figure of $177.75.

In this study, pupjils in the seventh and eighth grades in all schools are considered as part of the elementary average daily attendance.

Contra Costa ranked twelfth from the highest in total bonded indebtedness for elementary schools, while on a per student in average daily attendance basis the county ranked thirteenth.

Total bonded indebtedness for elementary schools, the Taxpayers' association finds, has decreased in thirty-three counties; while the burden per pupil in average daily attendance has decreased in thirty-five counties. ROGUE SONG ALL COLOR TALKIE

Because music creates, through the ear the consciousness of beauty that color conveys through the eye, the debut of the first major star of opera on the talking screen has been arranged with the use of both.

"The Rogue Song," Lawrence Tibbett's introduction to talking pictures, which Metro-Goldwyn Mayer will present Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at the Fox California theater, is not only replete with special song numbers, written for the great baritone, but has been filmed entirely in color.

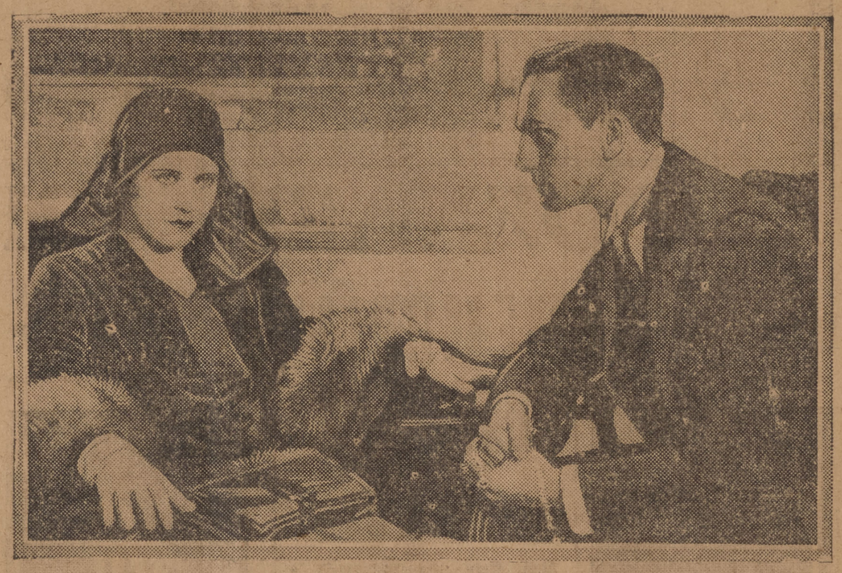
The undertaking involved many abtruse scientific problems in the matter of photographing sound on film which at the same time kept natural color values, and the completion of the work was hailed as one of the greatest triumphs for the Technicolor process.

Tibbett sings songs ranging frrom numbes of operatic magnitude with a symphony orchestra to simple love songs. Elsa Alsen, dramatic soprano, a women's chorus and a large male chorus are other elaborate musical details of the Russian drama.

The filming of the songs was done in a specially prepared set of sound stages. The orchestra in each case was housed in a "horn," or thin wood orchestra shell, in which three microphones of different frequencies were placed. Herbert Stothart, conducting, heard Tibbett's voice in the set outside over earphones as he conducted the accompaniment. Voice and music were put together or "mixed" in a monitor room insulated, so far as sound is concerned, from both sets.

"By filming action in color one is able to blend harmonies in hue, just as one blends them in music, and then blend them together in a perfect whole," Lionel Barrymore, director of the picture, said recently. "It is in this regard that color can be so valuable in the filming of music."

Sarah And Son



RUTH CHATTERTON and Fredric March in a scene from the Faramount picture "Sarah and Son" at the Fox California theater.

Sarah And Son To Be Shown At California

The powerful dramatic ability of Ruth Chatterton, displayed so successfully in "Charming Sinners" "The Laughing Lady" and "Madame X" will be again brought forward for the delecation of her numerous admirers today at the Fox-California theater when her newest film "Sarah and Son" will be shown.

"Sarah and Son" is the story of an impoverished actress who is forced to give up her baby boy that she might work and live. On becoming famous she tries to retrieve the lad but encounters intrigue upon the part of the wealthy couple who have adopted her child. The manner in which she accomplishes her courageous purpose forms the climax of the picture. It is tense and breath-taking—but it is one which leaves an audience in a happy glow of good spirits.

Fredric March is cast opposite Miss Chatterton. He plays the part of the young lawyer who falls in love with her and tries to help her retrieve her young son, played by Phillip de Lacy. There is an abundance of splendid character-portrayal in the picture.

Timothy Shea wrote the original novel upon which the screen story is based. Zoe Akins ,renowned American woman poet and playwright, wrote the adaptation from the novel.

The picture was directed by Dorothy Arzner, Paramount's only woman director.

Also on the program is a Fox Movietone News and Johnnie Arthur in "Scrappily Married."

FLIGHT TO BE SHOWN AT RICHMOND

Director Frank R. Capra's demand for realism in "Flight" the all talking aviation film now playing at the Richmond Theater, almost cost the lives of Jask Holt, featured player, and his pilot.

In one sequence Capra demanded that the airplane shots be made from a certain angle that would clearly show the rough topography of the Nicaraguan country. Space was chosen. There was insafficient room to make a safe landing or take-off. Each ascent and descent was hazardous. Although the plot landed cautiously at a reduced speed, the speed was too great to negotiate the landing safely. In an attempt to avoid a grove of trees, the pilot looped over into a barrance. Outside a few bruises, neither the pilot nor Holt were injured.

The plane was smashed but it did not catch fire. The landing was made at the extreme far end of the roughest section of the site. As there were no real roads, it took nearly half an hour for men and trucks to get to the spot where the plane crashed. When director Capra arrived on the scene, he expected to see Holt and the pilot either killed outright or seriously injured. He was happy to find only a damaged plane.

This little escapade did not prevent Capra from making scenes that involved just as much danger. "Flight" is crammed full of death-defying and thrilling situations. Jack Holt, Lila Lee and Ralph Graves play the leading roles.

RUSE USED TO QUELL RACE RIOTING

A gunshot and stab wound had left him in too serious condition for recovery, however. He died an hour later.

Although the ruse left the rioters empty-handed and with their feelings apparently cooled, crowds continued to gather at the ruined county jail all day. George Skinner, who stabbed Argo, was there. It was against his wife that the attack attempt was made. He had been arrested with five other men, but all were released pending further investigation of the incident.

Guilty Sought

"Shall I be put in jail?" Skinner cried during discussion of the night's struggle.

"No" thundered the crowds among which were many women.

A coroner's inquest probably will be held Tuesday, county officials announced.

"Some one is guilty of murder and I shall find who it is" said County Attorney Holding, the man who had pleaded with the crowd to abide within the law. He said he would confer with the governor Monday on the matter.

Negro Released

Holding said he was informed Argo recently had been released from the state reformatory at Granits after serving a sentence for a statutory offense.

The shooting and stabbing of Argo took place while guardsmen and officers mobilized hastily, struggled with the lynching party, which at one time numbered more than 500.

Skinner is a farm hand who lives about three miles from here. Mrs. Skinner and the child were not seriously hurt in the attempted attack. Skinner sought the Negro with a gun, but failed to find him. He reported to police. Argo was arrested when he came here. He was identified as the attacker by Mrs. Skinner."

Christian Science Lesson Subject

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism Denounced" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon tomorrow in all churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The citations which comprise the lesson-sermon, will include the following from the Bible: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: For where your treasure is, there will be your heart, also." (Matt. 6:19-1.)

The lesson-sermon also will include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.' If you have more faith in drugs than in truth, this faith will incline you to the side of matter and error. Any hpynotic power you may exercise will diminish your ability to become a Scientist, and vice versa. The act of healing the sick through Divine Mind alone, or casting out error with truth, shows your position as a Christian Scientist." (p. 181).

FABLES FOR THE FAIR

BY MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

What Is Left After Twenty?

ONCE upon a time there was an attractive, intelligent, sensitive girl named Jennifer,

Who was within a few months of her twentieth birthday,

And who thought to herself, wistfully, that "the best years of all would be over" soon.

Please, don't anybody over twenty laugh,

Or make sarcastically condescending remarks—

This is a fable for girls, and we know, from letters we have received,

That plenty of the young ones are like Jennifer

And cherish the honest belief that Life Is Practically Over at twenty, or twenty-one, or—at the most—twenty-five!

What we shall try to do is to "tell 'em different"—

But first we admit, and they probably will agree,

That their point of view and what may lead up to it is admirably summarized

In the story of Jennifer, which has been written by Barbara Noble, a young novelist in her early twenties.

Her book was published yesterday, with the title of "The Years That Take the Best Away."

The trouble with Jennifer was that

All through childhood and girlhood

She never really found herself,

Nor did she find in any one else love and understanding that lasted.

Her father and mother were kind to her,

But theirs was the remote and uncompanionable kindness of old-fashioned parents.

They were the calm Olympians who passed judgment.

And, as Jennifer was later to reflect, "Her father gave her no feeling of reliance.

"And if she once let go of the fiction that her mother's chief charm was her appealing helplessness,

"She would find it hard to forgive her a great many things."

As the older sister in the family, it was hers to console and counsel the other children—

Not to seek sympathetic help and understanding from them

Once she thought she could obtain both from a young aunt named Sydney,

But she was disillusioned—

She found that this aunt merely wanted to use her, to exploit her sympathies,

First as a confidante,

Later as an unwilling psychic guide into the realm of the unconscious—

More than one morbid, or erratic adult has played as ruthlessly on the heart-strings of the very young.

Then there was the wise, unselfish, devoted Cousin Clare,

Who really served as the understanding friend which every girl-child needs—

But death betrayed Jennifer here—

And how many girls, losing a mother, or another best beloved, in their cruelly sensitive years,

Have not shared "the fear of the child Jennifer,

"Who had found loving so painful and so perilous."

Bereavement at such an age seems so appallingly final—

More than one girl has resolved that never, again will she give fate such power to hurt—

"Some primitive instinct of self-preservation," Miss Noble writes of her Jennifer,

"Had made her desperately decided that no one whom she might chance to encounter

"Should be allowed to approach the dangerous proximity which gives the power to wound.

"To love was to bare your breast to a knife—

"But at arm's length no adversary could drive home his weapon."

Fortunately, no girl feels that way forever—

Yet there is one more way in which she can be hurt to the heart—

She can fall in love, as Jennifer did, with a boy who is not worthy,

An aggressive, shallow, ruthless, disloyal little cad—

"Love, if it came too soon," Jennifer finds,

"Was the most destructive of all to youth—

"Bringing in its train satiety and disillusion.

"Two things which aged one quicker than any others."

Well, then, at twenty, when family and friends and even the first sweetheart

Have, in one way or another, failed a girl,

What is left to her?

The answer we would give all girls, with every ounce of conviction we possess,

Is that all of life, and what she can make of it, is left to her!

To feel that may be difficult—

If she is sensitive, if she has been badly hurt—

But instead of trying to feel, let her use her head and think about it a little.

There was never a time since the world began

When so much that is interesting and worth while in the world was attainable by women

There is open to them at last, a tremendously wide field

For personal achievement and the development of ambition:

The young woman who throws herself into interesting work

Finds less opportunity for sensitive brooding and self-pity.

Then, as she gets out into a new environment and broadens her circle of acquaintances,

She is almost sure to find the understanding, the congenial friendship,

Which she may have missed in the more restricted circle

Of home and school and childhood association.

Furthermore, if first love, with all its young sweetness, fails her,

It is no longer even a convention for her to mourn it all her life—

The love affair of the late 'teens that goes wrong

Can and will hurt terribly, for the time being,

But, in the early twenties—or a few years later—

There is waiting for many a girl the man whom Fannie Heaslip Lea describes

In the witty dedication of her new novel, "Happy Landings,"

As "the second man—from whom a woman always learns better."

Finally, the girl past twenty who is worth her salt begins to find herself—

To measure her own strength, her self-reliance, her essential womanhood—

As even young Jennifer comes to know, "it was the only safety;

"If one could perfect it one would walk immune from pain for the rest of one's days—

"If one could always be friends with oneself."

Yes, no matter what has happened to you before twenty, the things that happen afterward matter most.

And what is left is just—everything!

Think It Over

By Alfalfa Smith

JUST what are you worrying about?

Would it not be a good idea to have a SYSTEM about your worry?

Why not worry efficiently?

This is the day of high speed. Everything is done to conserve time and so it might be a good idea to see if you could not cut down the hours per day in which you worry.

I have found that the things I worry about never happen.

The things which I naturally would, or should, worry about are so big I tackle them and DO THEM.

It is a very foolish thing for two people to worry about the same thing, especially a man and his wife.

The Beauty Shop

If You're Contemplating a "Permanent"

DESPITE the wonderful advances that have been made in permanent waving, still there are women who fear the invention, or at least hesitate before it.

Take the word of one who has investigated this permanent wave business pretty thoroughly—there's no need for either fear or hesitancy where the method of waving is reliable and the operator skilled. However, there's good ground for both fear and hesitancy over a bargain wave.

Save money on clothes, if you must, but not on sodas or taxis but not on your "permanent" — unless you are willing to risk the health and beauty of your hair, not to mention the unsuccessful wave. Standard methods of permanent waving and expert operators are not to be had cheaply as a rule.

Usually you will find that the bargain wave fails in giving the hair adequate protection against the heating process—the most essential part of the permanent waving process. This department has had occasion to examine various types of pads used for wrapping the hair before the heating.

Some of these pads are thin and paperlike offering little if any protection to the hair. These are the sort used for "bargain" waves so called. Other pads are substantial, really cover the hair without gaps. More than that, they supply the hair with tonic elements during the heating stage.

We are not at liberty to tell you by name which of the permanent waving methods are reliable and which ones are not. But this much can be told here. Buying a permanent wave is pretty much like buying a beauty preparation or a piano or a motor car, the reputation of the maker is your best assurance against disappointment.

Experiment if you care to on a new laundry soap or a revolutionary scheme for peeling potatoes, but when it comes to such irreplaceable things as skin and hair and eyes, better entrust them only to the tried and the true. Don't you agree?

One other precautionary measure we should like to suggest, especially to dry hair contemplating a permanent wave. A course of scalp treatments in advance of the wave will do much to prevent further drying of the hair after the wave and will do much to increase the success of the wave.

To-Day's Good Manners

By Millicent James

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

IF THERE is one place where, more than another, any one who is not quite certain of herself feels and is at a disadvantage, it is at the table, and table manners have undergone many changes within the past few years.

For one thing, none of the rules—at any rate, few of them—are so rigidly observed as formerly, not that there are not certain things one must and certain others that one must not do, such as making noisy work of the soup course or drowsing off if the conversation happens to be boring, but it isn't necessary, under the present code, to sit at the table as if you were encased in armor, as the old-time corsets made it more or less imperative to do.

It is permissible to be quite human nowadays about the way one sits even at a formal dinner. It is even permissible to loll a little, not quite as Lucullus used to, but you may put an elbow on the table if you take due care not to tip over a water glass or juggle the array of silver beside the plate. The latter noise is distracting, and as for the accident, let me take occasion to say right here that if such a catastrophe does happen, don't be embarrassed.

What I mean to say is, don't show that you are embarrassed—only sorry. Be nonchalant, and say, "Oh, I am sorry. How stupid of me," or something like that. Then when the servant or the waiter, or the hostess, or whoever it is, comes up, murmur a low "Thank you," and proceed as if nothing had happened.

But about leaning on the table. That used to be one of the most insistant of "Thou shalt nots" of table manners—even the touching of one elbow to the table. Then the rule was relaxed to allow one elbow, and now, well, even now one elbow is really enough to adorn the table and quite sufficient to demonstrate insouciance, and at that, only between courses.

Another rule that has been changed is that of transferring the fork from the left to the right hand after cutting the food, which requires the knife's service. It is perfectly all right to do so if you've been so accustomed, but we do now—as we have come to do a great many things—as the English do, carry the food to the mouth with the fork retained in the left hand. So much the simpler method. It saves juggling with the silver and is helpful in teaching you to become ambidextrous.

Speaking of the "array of silver" as I just did, there isn't really any array any more. At any rate, there shouldn't be, not as compared with the lavish display of weird looking implements with which we used to be confronted even at quite informal meals. No, three spoons and knives—three in all—at the right side of the plate, and three forks at the left is all that the new code of manners calls for or allows. If you have more to contend with you needn't be confused if you don't know what to do with them—you'll know that your hostess doesn't know either.

But what you must know of course is that you use the spoon, knife and fork first that is farthest removed from the plate, the next farthest next, and so on. Any other flat silver that may be needed will be brought in with the course. All of which saves us from a lot of guesswork, guessing which knife, fork or spoon to use with the different dishes. Haven't you ever found yourself, under the old regime, without anything at all suitable with which to attack the last course? I have.

There's another change that rejoices the heart, it is so sensible and sane and saves so much embarrassment. I mean the rule that the hostess is served first, always. It's so comfortable to know in advance that you don't have to worry about a complicated-looking dish, how to serve yourself from it—if serve yourself you do, &c. You have merely to watch the hostess if you've not met that particular culinary combination before, and do as she does.

Fighting Garden Insects

By Karin Broberg

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

ONE of the first insects to make its appearance is the aphid. Its favorite food is the tender green ends of rose branches. Spray with any of the nicotine preparations.

Red spider can be controlled by spraying the plants with water. If this should not be effective spray with soap solution. This is made by dissolving one pound of fish-oil soap in three gallons of hot water. This should be applied lukewarm.

Caterpillars can be controlled by spraying with arsenate of lead. This is made up by mixing together three level teaspoonfuls of the arsenate of lead with four quarts of water. This solution should not be used on plants with tender foliage.

The best remedy for ants is to poison them by applying carbon disulphide. Locate the nest, make a few holes about a foot apart. Pour a little carbon disulphide into each hole; close each hole by packing some damp earth over the opening. For several days keep the soil moist by sprinkling water. This method may also be used in destroying white grubs.

The rose slug is a small greenish caterpillar. It is to be found on the undersurface of leaves, or creeping over half-grown buds. This slug can be controlled by spraying with nicotine, or arsenate of lead.

The rose chafer or rose beetle is a yellowish-brown insect about one-third of an inch in length. This beetle may be controlled by spraying with Bordeaux mixture. The main thing with all remedies is to continue them. One application is of little use.

Summer Glassware

SEASONAL furnishings for the home embrace fittings for the table. Just as heavy winter hangings are replaced by light, airy and colorful curtains, the rich and heavier looking china is put aside for summer glassware, which makes meals far more attractive. Frosty greens and blues have an especially liquid, cool appearance, and combine beautifully with the pastels in table linen. Other colors in vogue are rose, green and topaz.

Washing the Flag

WITH the coming of three holidays in close succession, when you will display the American flag, it is well to look it over and see that it is clean.

Although we are cautioned not to let the flag of the United States trail in the water this does not apply to the cleansing of the flag. The Government sanctions washing of the flag if it is done carefully and is respectfully handled and here are the directions: Dip the flag in lukewarm soap suds; work it up and down in the water until clean; squeeze carefully out of several cool rinsing waters then, without wringing, hang it up immediately to dry. Care must be taken to observe the admonition, "At no time should the flag touch the ground."

The proper way to hang it on the line is to have the stripes run up and down and the blue field hanging over the line. When dry, press carefully.

You and Your Child

By Irma Morris

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

Play Fair!

"YOU'RE a mean, selfish girl," said a mother to her six-year-old daughter. "Give brother just one crayon. You certainly won't miss one!"

"No," answered the little miss, decisively. "He got a whole box when I got mine. He broke all his up and lost them, and I was careful with mine. I don't see why I should give him any." But he's crying," remonstrated the mother, and getting no response, she quickly added, "Give him a crayon right away or I'll punish you."

Is this mother being fair to either child? When she says, "You won't miss one crayon," she is reasoning from an adult standpoint. Some children cherish their possessions dearly and are very loth to part with them, especially to anyone who will not value or take care of them. Through having their own property respected, children learn to respect the belongings of others. We must never infringe upon a child's sense of property rights. Of course, we want to teach our youngsters generosity; but they will certainly not feel generous when they think they are being unfairly treated. And generosity and unselfishness cannot be forced! They must be nurtured and encouraged. We have to lead a child slowly to share his playthings and then praise his generosity, whenever he shows it. Don't you think the little girl we have been talking about, was justified in insisting upon her rights?

And how harmful to baby brother, to let him feel that he can have anything of sister's he wants, just for the asking! Will he ever learn to care for his own belongings, if he knows that when his are destroyed, all he has to do is to demand some of hers? He has learned to use his ever ready tears on a sympathetic mother, who constantly says, "He's only a baby." But the habits he learns in babyhood, will be very difficult to unlearn, later on. It is fortunate for this child that his sister is not a spineless creature. If she were, he would become badly "spoiled."

How often one meets a parent who expects the older child to constantly "give in" to the younger. This is bad for both children. The older child, if he has any will of his own, feels a keen sense of resentment; and the younger, when he gets out into the world and has to compete with equals, will be greatly handicapped.

We must consider the needs and rights of each of our children, when acting as arbiter between them. Better far to endure the crying of the baby for a short time, than to have him grow up to be a selfish, spoiled youngster, while his sister becomes a sulky, resentful one!

Oh, Go to Bed

By Eliot Kays Stone

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

"DAD, does Uncle Bob have a slate?"

"Certainly not. At least, I'm sure he hasn't had one since he was a boy at school. We all had slates then."

"Is Uncle Bob's slate broken?"

"Why, no, Son; I told you, he hasn't any slate."

"But I heard him telling you they'd fixed up the slate."

"Oh, that's a different kind of a slate."

"What kind of a slate is that?"

"It's just a list of candidates the politicians agree to support at the primaries, as regular nominees of their party."

"How did the politicians repair Uncle Bob's slate?"

"Oh, go to bed."

The Illusion of Slimness

THE large waist looks far more attractive when there is an appearance of comfort and freedom than when there is a nailed-in effect. The belt may do its good turn by being placed where it will give proportion to the figure. A very narrow shoe-string belt is disastrous, for contrast in sizes lays emphasis on the larger. A fancy wide girdle of contrasting color screams "embonpoint."

And why increase the width of the waist by sleeves which are full at the wrist? asks Margaret Story in "Individuality and Clothes."

The figure with large hips should always be well corseted in a garment comfortable alike when the wearer is standing or sitting. It is best fitted by an expert.

Never should there be an effect of tightness across the hips. Fulness can be given in subtle ways. A slight bloused treatment in the back, over a well-fitted girdle of the same fabric as the dress, will conceal too great size.

Except for street clothes, hem lines should never be hard, sharp and critically exact. Soft, fluid lines of costumes for formal wear may run out in unexpected ways—points, sash-ends, floating panels, trailing scarfs. These devices add a sense of height, conceal large limbs and lend an air of dignity.

New Aid to the Growth of Hair

SCIENTISTS claim that almost all chronic hair troubles are traceable directly to starved, undernourished roots. There has appeared in beauty shop circles a new machine for which positive claim is made that the growth of the hair can be promoted.

Results of hand massage are doubtful as they depend entirely upon the ability of the individual. To assure intense circulation of the blood in the scalp, the new massage device does with mechanical accuracy what human hands cannot guarantee at all times. Four mechanical hands move slowly up toward the crown of the head and back again, their numerous rubber fingers gripping it gently into little folds, lifting, stretching, kneading, revitalizing. The circulation is quickened, toxic poisons and waste matter carried away, and fresh blood brought to nourish the hair cells.

Three principles involved in the revivifying of the hair include this massage by machine; a cleansing of the scalp by a conditioner to soften accumulations leading to the sebaceous glands and acting as a lubricant and an antiseptic, followed by a shampoo and thirdly the application of a dressing containing Vitamin D, which scientists have found essential to hair growth, fused with one of the constituents of fine sheep's wool. Tests have proved that this fusion from sheep's wool is a vital agent in promoting soft, luxurious hair in animals. And this, activated with the natural, beneficial, ultra-violet rays of the sun or Vitamin D, offers a powerful stimulant to the scalp.

Home Notes

Tubular steel furniture bids fair to supersede rattan and wicker for porch and lawn use. Painted in apple green or old blue and fitted with bright colored cushions, these are extremely attractive and the chairs are luxuriously comfortable. If you want something real smart, there is the mahogany lacquer finish with a back and seat cushion. The back cushions are kept in place with snappers.

At a recent shower a rose-colored kitchen set was greatly admired. It was of knitted fabric and consisted of a dish cloth, pot cloth, wash mitt, holder and clothes bag. These sets come in other kitchen colors and are attractively boxed.

One housewife has just completed renovations in her home. The sun room in green, orange and rust makes one want to linger there. The bathroom is charming in the unusual combination of turquoise blue and apricot and in a bedroom she combined the popular French blue with eggshell and peach.

A Handy Window Box

WHEN putting up the porch and window boxes do not forget the kitchen window. In this box you can raise mint, parsley, chives, sage, &c., sufficient for your own use and, perhaps, you can help out a friend or two, occasionally, with soup greens and garnishings.

Have a scissors hanging nearby. You will find it so convenient to cut these greens from the window box whenever you need them and in the fall you can dry them for winter use.

TELLING THE WORLD

By Neal O'Hara

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

(Millions of American wage slaves are capable of better things. By a little home study in the evening—or in the day time if you are a night watchman—you can become a captain of industry with a fine home, luxurious motor cars and plenty of divorces. We are continuing our series of home lessons this week for ambitious readers. For the first time you can obtain such instruction without filling in a coupon. Hitherto, the hardest part of going to college by mail has been to write your name and address on a coupon the size of a special delivery stamp. Many residents of Albuquerque and Chattanooga have abandoned a correspondence course rather than attempt to write their addresses on an inch-long dotted line. It is to aid just such people as these that this series of lessons is designed. The opening course in this series, which starts promptly to-day, tells how to become a fight promoter. It is open to any one who can read or write. If you can do both, so much the better.)

HOW TO BECOME A FIGHT PROMOTER

(In one lesson, flat)

INTELLIGENCE of a very special sort is required to be a fight promoter. The first thing to do is to be graduated from a first class college. Then forget everything you learned. This still leaves you twice as smart as the people who buy your tickets at $27.50 each.

Let us say you have contracts with Sock McGowan and Young Bimbo to fight when the time is ripe. Well, first you let Sock McGowan flatten ten cripples from the Old Soldiers' Home. This gives him a reputation as a Man Killer.

In the meantime Young Bimbo has been fanning a bevy of dancing partners to sleep, and he is mentioned in the papers as a Title Contender. So you announce you will bring these young slaughterers together when you can get a ball park of sufficient capacity.

About this time you receive numerous telegrams, collect, that Muskogee, Okla., is in the market for the fight with an offer of $600,000, practically subscribed. Sheridan, Wis., also wants the honor and bids $750,000 in cigar coupons. You flash these wires and tell the New Yorkers they will have to come high to keep the battle in town. That makes the boys get ready to cough up $50 for ringside seats.

In arranging accomodations for newspaper men, you figure every sports writer is thirteen inches wide. This helps the boys to get together closer in a spirit of camaraderie.

Right in back of the press benches you mark off 13,000 choice seats for Governors, Mayors, the Secretary of the Navy, Admirals, Generals, movie stars, jail wardens, industrial magnates and leaders of the bar. In other words, if an airplane does a nose dive into that crowd, the brains of America will be cut off.

You don't have to worry about the other ringside clients in back of these. They haven't any brains at all. If they had, they wouldn't be paying $27.50 for their seats.

Finally, you wave your hand to the referee and the fight is on. On the customers. And if Young Bimbo makes a mess of Sock McGowan, it isn't your fault. McGowan was just a shell of his former self and you don't claim to be a sea food inspector.

When the arduous work of counting up the money is finished, you take a twelve-months' rest. Or, if you like the business, you start framing Another Big Match for next year.

This latter gesture is not necessary, however. You only have to be a fight promoter once.

THIS AND THAT

Mussolini has solved so many big problems, it's a wonder he never straightened out the Leaning Tower of Pisa.

The Society of Herpetologists (snake lovers) and the Society of Ichthyologists (fish lovers) met in New York this week. We don't see why these societies don't merge and just become lovers of eels.

The chief qualification for being a Congresswoman these days seems to be that you were left a widow.

GOLDEN DAWN

by MARC O'FARRELL

Copyright 1930. Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

This story is based on Warner Bros. Vitaphone production of the play by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein II.

SYNOPSIS

Dark-skinned Dawn, mystery girl, becomes the bride, against her wishes, of the black god Malunghu. Her sweetheart, Tom Allen, has been transported to England, on the instigation of Shep Keyes, whip-wielding bully with influence over the blacks. Shep's purpose is to have the field clear for his sinister designs on Dawn. Over her he holds the whip of native vengeance should the fact that she is white be divulged. Tom is with the British who recapture the East African territory from the Germans. The natives supplicate the British to end the drought; then, balked, they turn on Dawn and plan to burn her, for not being able to bring rain, as their goddess.

INSTALLMENT TWENTY-SEVEN

When Eric had left, Colonel Judson admitted an orderly. For several seconds he paced the floor while the visitor stood at attention. The commander appeared to be having extreme difficulty arriving at a decision. Suddenly he turned to the waiting orderly.

"My orders to your captain," he said decisively, "are that he shall locate this place they call the Hill of Skulls and cover it with a guard. He is not to permit any natives to come within one hundred yards of the place. We are to have no human sacrifices."

The orderly saluted and departed to deliver the order.

Colonel Judson had made up his mind that Captain Eric had given him excellent advice, that the one certain way of preserving peace was to impress the severest possible discipline on the natives. He was resolved that if actually pressed, blacks and also despite their overwhelming numbers of the blacks and also despite their desperate plight.

Hasmali summoned the natives.

Meantime, Eric had wandered off to the canteen to help with the assembling of the luggage of the exchanged prisoners. He found Pigeon in charge, that blithe Cockney singing of the joys which, in the words of his song, he would be a long time in knowing again. He greeted Eric briefly.

"I 'opes we get these 'ere German supplies checked up before noon," he added. "It's goin' to be hotter'n 'ell by that time."

Eric agreed. "Still, it'll be hotter in Berlin for me," he said sadly.

Pigeon's amazement was matched only by his disgust. He stared at Eric in silence for several seconds, and then exploded.

"It beats me," he ejaculated. "why everybody that gets sent 'ome comes around 'ere weeping about it. Now take me, what wouldn't I give to go 'ome? And what happens. First, they send a bunch o' undeservin' blighters, and then the British capture the post so we'll never get away. You're lucky, Captain."

"Don't worry," spoke up Blink. "Say, if any of them high officers back there want to know what you were up against down here, all they have to do is to come down for themselves."

"There are few serviceable alibis in the German army," said Eric, smiling.

"Yeah?" observed Pigeon. "Well, Captain, with respect to you there'll be plenty before this 'ere war is over."

"I'm afraid so," sighed Eric.

"And then you'll probably come back here—after the war is over, just like Tom Allen," offered Blink.

"Yes, I remember Tom announcing that he was coming back," said Eric.

"I've go a hunch Tom'll blow in here any day," said Blink sagely. "In fact it's more than a hunch. I've got some pretty good suspicions."

"You know, Shep's been hangin' around the canteen all the time the past few days, acting pretty sore."

"Aw, that's because the Colonel threatened to arrest 'im for wearing the uniform of the Askari guard," scoffed Pigeon.

"It isn't that," insisted Blink. "Now, Johanna knows all these native tricks, and she knows Shep Keyes. The only thing on Shep Keyes' mind that ain't Dawn is Tom Allen."

"There's plenty of submarines Tom's got to get through before he gets back 'ere," declared Pigeon.

"If he's the same obstinate Britisher he used to be, he'll get through them," laughed Eric.

At that moment, in accordance with the best melodramatic traditions and perhaps also to support his reputed obstinacy and Blink's hunch, Tom appeared on the trail approaching the canteen.

"By the bloomen sword of Nelson," gasped the amazed Pigeon, the first to see him.

Tom raised a whoop of delight and ran toward his three companions. There was a noisy exchange of greetings, dozens of unanswered questions and the general confusion of a reunion. It was then noticed that Tom was wearing the uniform of a captain of British infantry.

"Oh, yes," he explained, "I've been off to the war. It's lots of fun. I'm on my first leave now and here I am."

"I am going away," said Eric.

"Serves you right," rejoined Tom. "You exchanged me when I didn't want to go and now they're shipping you back to Germany—and you don't want to go?"

Eric laughed. "Very true," he admitted, "but you had something to bring you back."

"Yes," Tom agreed, "I've come back for Dawn."

All hesitated to apprise him at once of Dawn's danger." And afterward?" queried Eric.

Tom's gesture confessed his lack of plans. "Quien sabe?" he quoted. "Who can tell? If this war goes on we might meet, you and I, somewhere in Flanders."

"God forbid!" Eric's tone was fervent.

In his casual inspection of the canteen Tom remarked the absence of the native guards, now all replaced by Englishmen. He felt genuinely sorry, that is, as a British captain of infantry is able to feel for an officer of his nation's enemy.

"Perhaps now, Eric," he asked, as he and the German seated themselves at a table on the veranda, "you are able to understand my deep reluctance to part from here."

"Fully," admitted Eric. "And you know, Tom, I've regretted times over, my haste in believing that black monster's word over yours that day. But perhaps it is all for the best. Here you are—and in a position to perform a real service for Dawn."

"Is Dawn in need of help," Tom asked quickly, fearful of Eric's answer.

The duty of apprising Tom of Dawn's real peril was too great for Eric to undertake. It was cowardly, he knew to keep this eager lover in ignorance, but he couldn't force himself to destroy Tom's joy with disastrous tidings.

"Why, Tom," he boomed disarmingly, "certainly you know that Dawn is now the goddess Thabu, the idol of the natives. What could happen to her to make her need help?"

"Unless things have changed considerably since my departure, she will always need help while Shep Keyes befouls this settlement with his presence," Tom remarked grimly. "By the way, what has happened to Shep?"

Grateful that the change of topic had spared him from further discussion of Dawn, Eric smiled in relief. "Oh, Shep," he echoed. "Oh, you'll be delighted to know that he's been sent back into the bush with the rest of the blacks. He has been stripped of his power."

"Whip and all?" asked Tom, grinning.

"He's even lost his medals," laughed Eric. "He's the meekest native you ever saw. The kids even taunt him. You have nothing to fear. He's harmless."

But one man who heard these words of Eric's disagreed with them. That man was Shep himself, within easy earshot in the foliage. He scowled darkly at Eric's jovial belittlement of his prowess.

"Harmless is I?" he muttered to himself. "You am goin' to learn different, Captain Eric and you, too, Captain Allen.

At the first opportunity, Shep hurried to Colonel Judson's quarters. With the humility he had acquired by his demotion to the jungle, he communicated to the orderly a desire to see the commander. Judson, who detested Shep, hesitated to see him, but upon second thought decided it would be well to advise the trouble-maker that the British military intended to prevent the sacrifice of Dawn.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping." Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. TWO KILLED IN RIOTING

PESHAWAR, India., May 31.—UP—Rioting broke out here today. Some casualties resulted including two children and a woman who were shot accidentally when troopers fired into the mob.

BOMBAY, May 31.—UP— Three national congress volunteers who rode to Sholapur eager to violate the rules of the British martial law there came back to Poona today clother only in loin cloths.

Authorities of the cty, which has been under martial law since fierce rioting three weeks ago forced evacuation of all European women and children, met the volunteers and confiscated the green shirts and red shorts the volunteers wore as emblems of the national congress. Loin cloths then were handed the independence seekers, and they were put aboard another train headed towards Bombay.

The three were apparently the only members of a party of 27 which left here for Sholapur intending to hoist national congress flags in the city in violation of martial law. National congress leaders had intended the move as a new and drastic step in defiance of the British government in India.

Frustrated in that attempt, the local committee of the congress planned another mass raid on the Wadala Salt works tomorrow. The works, located near Bombay, was the scene of several raids two weeks ago, which led to many arrests.

2 More Bodies Recovered From Wreck Of Ship

where bodies might have become foul'ed in kelp that it was probable that no more would be found for several days.

Three bodies were recovered soon after the Ameco capsizd as it was returning with its happy Memorial Day crowd from a deep sea fishing excursiion. Forty-eight were known to have been brought safely ashore, leaving eleven unaccounted for.

The known dead were:

Margaret Keller, 20, Santa Monica.

C. C. Barnett, 28, Los Angeles.

John W. Lockhart, 14, Pasadena.

High Waves

High rollers and a stiff northwesterly wind hampered the searching vessels buffeting them about over the rough surface of the bay as they plied back and forth during the night.

The Ameco, commanded by Captain Bill Lightfoot, was a mile and a half off shore when the tragedy overtook it. The captain and his deckhand, Henry Vandeberg, were among those saved.

The disaster was attributed by the master of the craft to unexpected seas and the rush of passengers to one side of the boat.

"We were under power returning to the docks," he said, "when some very big swells suddenly were blown up by a strong wind and broke over our bows. Everyone ran to the port side. The effect of the waves and the shift in passengers caused the boat to keel over and she sank almost immediately."

The Ameco was a wooden-hulled vessel, built in 1917, and had been in pleasure service three years.

Wife Sues Mate In Land Suit

MARTINEZ, May 31.—To void a lease entered into between O. A. Sodern and the Shell Oil company, Mrs. Elfreida Sodern, today filed suit against her husband. The lease involves a quarter of acre of land in San Pablo, and the complaint charges that after executing the lease to the oil company, Sodern took a sub lease from the firm.

Mrs. Sodern, who is represented by Attorney T. N. Calfee, contends the land is community property and that as she did not consent to the lease nor sign the document, it has no legal standing.

CALFEE MAKES STIRRING MEMORIAL ADDRESS HERE

daughters are gathered together to pay honor to those of our comrades who have gone before and I am only sorry that more of our citizens have not joined us. For here at the graves of our heroes, are not the "fires of patriotism again fanned into the pure white flame of idealism?"

Peace Reigns

America holds a unique position among nations. Unlike the countries of the old world or those colonies founded to further the trade of the mother country America was founded by a group of stern idealists whose unswerving purpose it was to found a country where they might be free to worship God as they chose. Franklin said, "Freedom must be won not once but over and over again," and the history of our country testifies to the truth of that statement. Not only were the colonists forced to fight for freedom in the Revolution but again for the freedom of the seas in 1812—Then in those dark days of the 60's was it necessary to fight to save the country dedicated to the ideal of freedom. When it seemed certain we had maintained our ideal for ourselves we found it necessary to fight for the freedom of our Spanish American neighbors—and finally in the World War we again found it necessary to defend our right to sail the seas in safety and had the ideals which led us into that conflict been accorded first place in the minds and hearts of those gathered round the peace table the world today would be far nearer its emancipation from the curse of the fear of war.

Today peace reigns but as Franklin truly said the battle for freedom is never won, and today America has as great a need for heroes as during any war, for she is being attacked by foes more insidious and deadly than any hitherto vanquished. The forces of greed and corruption of our forefathers that this should be a truly representative form of government but what do we find today, selfish interests and individuals are everywhere trying to stifle the will of the people by the power of wealth, influence, and position. The man on the job is told how to vote, what candidate to work for and whom to work against.

Scores Voters

Thsoe seeking public office are often told under what conditions they may run and unless the candidate is willing to compromise and be a puppet to a group of politicians, he is "ganged up" upon. Economic pressure is brought to bear upon him, and the welfare of his family is jeopardized as well as his very economic existence. This system of a small gang of politicians attempting to throttle the will of the people is a cancerous growth upon our body politic and must be removed if our democracy is to endure. We are gradually building up a caste system in which only the wealthy can seek public office. Such a system sounds the death knell of any poor boy or girl regardless of his or her ability.

Why is such a state of affairs possible Only because we—the rank and file of citizens do not diligently bestir ourselves on behalf of the public good. It should be a matter of shame to every loyal American that only a fraction over 50 percent of our possible voters go to the polls. In 1789 when the American people founded a new government based on the will of the people expressed through the ballot they were comparatively lonesome pioneers in an undeveloped field. Today 90 percent of the governments of the world are controlled by ballot. During the first of the century this country held the world record in voting efficiency—about 80 percent of the qualified electorate went to the polls and voted. But a survey made since 1900 shows a deplorable increase in the stay at home vote. In the presidential election of 1820 less than one-half the qualified electors went to the polls. In spite of a movement to get out the vote 1924 showed only a slight improvement with only a fraction over 50 percent of the American electorate at the pools, and this my friends fails to take into account those who failed even to register. In contrast to this the same survey shows that the European countries, Australia, and the Canadian provinces are setting up an average of 70 percent to 80 percent. Even Latin America with its native illiterate population does better than our southern states and all European countries do better than the voters of our northern states.

Scores Ignorance

In the second place we do not make sufficient effort to inform ourselves. Ignorance has always been the domain of despots. Whereas in the last century every crossroad store found men met to discuss political affairs, today more often than not we find the last Big league game the sole topic of conversation. We read but one side of national questions if at all and don't stop to inquire if that one source of information be a, prejudiced press.

There is moreover an increasing tendency to vote with our class, but let us remind ourselves that America is dedicated to a true democracy expressed by the majority of all the people and that tyranny is equally irksome whether it be exercised by an individual hereditary ruler, an oligarchy of wealth or a dictatorship of any one class.

Fourthly—there is a woeful lack of interest in the way our representatives both those elected to legislative bodies and those to administrative positions carry out the duties entrusted to them. Contrast with this attitude of indifference on the part of the general public, the tactics of organized vice and monopoly—always watchful, ever informed of every stand taken by those in public life, loyal in support of those who bow to them, swift and sure in the punishment of those who fail to surrender. Too many times sometimes due to our indifference and ignorance, sometimes to our selfish engrossment in private business, we fail to support the very people who have fought our fight for us. What wonder then that an increasing number ally themselves with those forces which never fail to mete out reward or punishment?

James Russell Lowell said:

True freedom is to share
All the chains our brothers wear
And, with heart and hand, to be
Earnest to make others free!
They are slaves who fear to speak
For the fallen and the weak:
They are slaves who will not choose
Hatred, scoffing and abuse,
Rather than in silence shrink
From the truths they needs must think;
They are slaves who dare not be
In the right with two or three.

The crying need of America today is for men sufficiently interested in America's welfare to give of their own time and money to support the general good—men whose insight and vision distinguishes between propoganda and news, men with the courage, my friends, to be "in the right with two or three!"

We have scattered out floral tributes today over the graves of our brave and loyal dead. These frail mementoes will soon wither but maybe not hope that here today we may be inspired with a new spirit of loyalty to America's ideals and as our martyred president said in the words just read by our comrades may we here dedicate ourselves to the end that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.

PITTSBURGH.—At one time a millionaire, the late James M. Guffy, a national figure in politics and founder of the Gulf Oil company, died virtually penniless, absence of a will and failure to take out letters of administration in the register of wills' office, indicated.

All Star Nine Defeated By Native Sons

The Native Sons, champions of this year's American Legion Junior baseball league, conquered the All-Stars team chosen from last year's American Legion winners 5 to 1 Friday afternoon.

The contest was the first annual Doc Seawright Memorial Day contest.

Friday's game was a battle from start to finish. Both squads succeeded in getting but four hits. Lemon started on the mound for the Native Sons, allowing two walks and whiffing two batters. Lemon was replaced by Passoni, who fanned three hitters and allowed four walks. Bono twirled during the entire game for the losers, and allowed four hits, two walks, and struck out seven Native Sons. The only long hit of the game was a double by Scarcella.

The Native Sons are now ready to represent Richmond in the state American Legion Junior competition.

the country. "Contributions" to the Lucich defense fund have been exacted through racketeer persuasion Greer was told.

As to the Santa Rosa angle, federal authorities remember that there had been talk two months ago of Sturtevant, arch-stool pigeon, turning on operators of a huge still seized near Mark West and giving testimony for the government, with threats of reprisal. The case has not yet come to trial.

Tying in with what was already known of Sturtevant, stories of his activities, if believed, would furnish several dozen underworld grudges, anyone of which would probably seem sufficient to the bearer to plan his death, officials said.

Apprised that California racketeers were suspected of the murder of Nick Kruger, Seattle bootlegger, federal officials admittedly were ready to believe that the affair was somehow an outgrowth of internecine strife in the bootleg battalion operating in Santa Clara, San Mateo, San Francisco and Marin counties.

Stockton 9 Will Meet Local Elks

The Sterling Pump baseball club of Stockton will journey to Richmond June 15, to give battle to George Shaw's Richmond Elks at 2:30 o'clock on the first street diamond.

The Richmond Elks are expected to meet with plenty of strong opposition in the fast Stockton team. The Sterling Pump nine recently defeated the Associated Oil team 24 to 0 in a Stockton City Twilight league game. The Barberde brothers, Maxie and Paul, will attempt to perform their usual home run hitting stunt for the visitors. Two former Richmond boys Elmer Hansen and Dan Alley, will be playing with the Stockton squad today.

Odd Fellows In Win Over Pittsburg 9

The Richmond Odd Fellows had a very memorable Memorial Day at Pittsburg Friday when they trampled the Pittsburg Columbians with a score of 12 to 2.

Johnny Bibich, hefty high school chucker, pitched a spectacular two hit game for the local lodgemen. He fanned six Pittsburg swatters, and walked but three. He also starred for the Richmond squad in the hitting end of the game, connecting with the agate for hits four out of five times at bat. He reached three bags on an especially hard-hit ball. Jack and Carl Pinto also tripled for the Richmond athletes, while Wickesser and Moitoza netted two-base hits for the Odd Fellows.

The Pittsburg Columbians were forced to use three pitchers in an effort to stem the terrific hitting orgy being held by the visiting Odd Fellows. However, the combined efforts of Haley, Howard, and Davis could not prevent the Richmond boys from collecting 129 hits.

CHRYSLER "77" AVERAGES 90 PER

An average of 90 miles an hour for the Chrysler "77" and 77.2 miles an hour for the new low-priced Chrysler six briefly tells the story of a series of speed trials recently staged on Dry Lake bed at Muroc, California, according to Harry Curry, local dealer.

Aside from the removal of the windshield, both roadsters were strictly stock cars. Even the headlamps and fenders were left on, and all runs were made with standard equipped gear ratios, spark plugs and carburetors. Timers, observers and newspapermen made the trip to the lake bed, 135 miles southeast of Los Angeles for these unique tests over a dry, packed sand racing course, 23 miles in circumference.

30-Mile Wind

As there was a 30-mile wind blowing across the course, it was decided that the run should be made in both directions, and an average struck in order that any advantage the wind might give in one direction would be offset by its resistance in running the opposite direction.

Over a measured mile, the "77" showed an average of 92 miles an hour with the wind in three trials and 88 miles an hour against the wind in three trials or a mean average of 90 miles an hour. Three stop watches caught its time, and the variation was not more than one-fifth of a second on any run. A passenger rode with the driver on every trip.

The speedometer on the "77" was replaced by a tachometer which accurately registered the revolutions per minute of the engine. From prepared tables, it was a simple matter for the driver to calculate fairly accurately the speed of the car, which was also checked against the average as caught by the stop watches. It was not practical to rely on the tachometer for the timing, as motor revolutions per minute drive the car at slightly varied speeds at different places on the course.

Clocked Three Times

After the "77" had been put thru its paces, the new low-priced Chrysler six was put on the course with the same procedure. Three times each way on the course, clocked by three stop watches with the result that the car averaged 77.2 miles an hour.

"Chryslers have always been sold on performance," said J. W. Frazer, general sales manager of the Chrysler Sales corporation, "and while we realize that such tremendous speed is impractical in ordinary driving, it is a clear indication of the reserve power built into Chrysler products. With maximum speeds as high as this, no Chrysler owner ever need to worry about taxing his engine, regardless of how far he drives it at any highway speed."

CHRYSLER "77"
PRICES Smashed
$200 to $350
This tremendous slash in current Chrysler "77" prices is occasioned by the fact that sometime in midsummer Chrysler will introduce a new model to take the place of the present Chrysler "77". ¶ Other Chrysler models, "70", "66" and Chrysler Six, are being continued unchanged. ¶ Meanwhile the supply of Chrysler "77" models is rapidly melting away at $200 to $350 off regular prices. An opportunity like this won't last long. Bring in your present car for appraisal. Liberal financing facilities are available.
